

Range Stewardship and Stockmanship Clinic

May 11 from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Brite Ranch in Bowie, Texas

This ranching clinic will focus on range stewardship and effective stockmanship, including low stress cattle handling methods. The clinic will provide information on grazing land management, address range recovery from wildfires, as well as current issues and topics important to ranch management and beef production.

Featured speakers include NRCS range management specialists Mark Mosely and Kent Ferguson, and effective stockmanship specialists Ron Gill and Curt Pate.

The cost is $10 per person, which includes a chuckwagon lunch.

For more information and to RSVP for this program contact the Chisholm Trail RC&D at 940.872.5329 before May 6.

A Plant ID book and the new Grazing Land Stewardship Manual will be available for purchase at the event.

The Texas Grazing Lands Conservation Initiative (GLCI), USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) and Texas AgriLife Extension are hosting the clinic. It is co-sponsored by Chisholm Trail Resource Conservation and Development Council (RC&D), Priefert, and Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association.
